can demand in conversion five-twenty bonds, having twenty years to run from the date of conversion, whereas this is not the case as they can see by referring to the indoresment of each note which reads thus:—

At maturity convertible, at the option of the holder, into bonds redeemable at the pleasure of the government at any time after five years, and payable twenty years from the 15th of August, 1867, with interest at six per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, in coin.

Here it is distinctly stated that the notes are not convertible into five-twenty bonds till the date of their maturity, pending which the Treasury has the option of making whatever terms it can with the holders of the notes. At present it offers to buy for cash the August notes at 108%, or to exchange them for bonds after adjusting the interest on both in currency. The total issue of seven-thirty notes originally amounted to $330,000,000, of which $300,000,000, was of the first series, due August 15, 1867; $300,000,000, of the second series due July 15, 1868, About two hundred and fifty millions of the whole have been already funded, but owing to the monthly statements of the national debt giving no details of the amount of each series outstanding, it is impossible to say how much of each series has been funded.

The receipts for customs, and the receipte, payments and balances at the Sub-Treasury in this city for the expired portion of the week, have been as follows:—
